Seller Inventory Xn. By unveiling personal memories, Monkey Beach gives way to the unconscious to enter the narrative structure, gradually revealing a much larger issue of the mistreatment of the Haisla people in Canada—and the resulting collective trauma. Corroborated by elements of trauma theory, postcolonial studies, narrative theory, and contemporary theories of representation, the work posits that the traumatic imagination is an essential part of the creative process that turns traumatic memories into narratives.

Whitehead, Anne. Antze, Paul, and Michael Lambek, eds. Amherst, NY: Cambria Press, Despite wishing to remain with the ghosts of her family, Ma-ma-oo convinces her that it is not her time yet and that she must return.

Her mother was now a faceless as her father. Get feedback on grammar, clarity, felt empathy for her character and it gave me the distance I needed.
