Two, that while there is no concept of a codified list of sins in Hinduism, almost anything that seems like a deviation from the norm can be construed as evil in our land. It did to me now what Harry Potter had done to me in my school days. It includes 18 related to occupation, 11 to educational institutions, 10 to political rights, 14 to government policy and programs, 7 to government and NGO offices, 13 to development programs and donors, and 8 to ASURA: Tale Of The Vanquished and cultural activities.

This is such a bad interpretation, I am sick about the author. It is poignant in its relationships. But does that mean that they do not have a story to be told? It is society who creates all these boundaries.

This was where once he used to play, which he loved as his own home. Other editions. I urge people, not to take it as anti-Brahmin, anti-Hinduism or anti-Ramayana.
