International Conference on Haematological Disorders in the Elderly. This book provides a comprehensive overview of the current state of research on haematological disorders in the elderly. I was particularly interested in the chapters on dementia with Lewy bodies and frontotemporal dementia by Revell and Vallejo. Yet, the mechanism underlying this unique feature remains largely unknown. On the whole, this book is comprehensive, yet concise and discusses various aspects of adult stem cells in ageing, diseases and cancer with an aim to understand the significance of each of these to portray the future of stem cell research as a drug to control some of the degenerative diseases which cannot be controlled otherwise with the existing drugs. Tenth Aarhus Stress Conference. ECO Newsletter Issue 1. USA98—Information about satellite stem cell dynamics, Wnt and Notch signalling involved in muscle stem cell ageing is also provided.
